

The Development of Wall Street, in Relation to the Five Basic Chinese Elements

从金木水火土 看华尔街和英语的协调发展

According to the ancient Chinese Book of Changes (I Ching), the Five Basic Elements (Metal, Wood, Water, Fire, and Earth) have the quality of being Yin and Yang and harmoniously. The I Ching also provides a philosophical basis for the study of the dynamic relationship between the static and the dynamic elements within the world of education.

The concept of the interrelation and continuity of Yin and Yang embodies the ancient doctrine of Yin-Yang philosophy, which has a similar light to the doctrine of the five elements. Yin and Yang are regarded as two forms of being, with Yin being the "substance" and Yang being the "function". The world is composed of matter which is a continuous state of flux and transformation, as is a continuous process of development and evolution.

Looking at this perspective, we can see Wall Street English as such, through the powerful tool of English language, has set up a communication bridge for the people of America's communities and the world. Wall Street English has also been instrumental in the field of education, providing professional and high-quality education to its students.
